TAFT MAKES PLEA FOR POSTAL BANKS

torium, the largest assembly hall in the city, where he delivered a brief speech on the general policies of the Republican party, contrasting them with those of the Democratic party. The Auditorium was crowded to its capacity, and the meeting was one of great enthusiasm. The St. Paul stop occupied more than an hour, when the journey to Minneapolis was made. Here, too, the meeting was held in the Auditorium, the capacity of which was taxed.

At Fairbault, Mr. Taft was invited to take a seat on a large elephant which was led to the rear of his train. The animal was decorated with the familiar "O. R." signs and was ridden by what the candidate declared to be a very pretty girl. "I'd like mighty to be up there with you," he told her, while the crowd laughed. "But I know you have not a derrier strong enough for me to mount. But just the same, I believe I could ride that animal with great success."

As to Security.
Mr. Taft, in his speech to-night, said: "Mr. Bryan says that as the government has security for deposits in the banks, why should not the individual depositor have security? Government deposits are not a commercial matter, and they are usually passive deposits that are not checked out every day, but are allowed to lie a long time in the banks. The government is rich enough and strong enough not to give deposits to the bank if it does not choose to, and may keep them with entire security in a safe of its own."

"It only makes the deposits for the purpose of releasing the proceeds of taxes which are not immediately necessary for the use of the government, and which is in the public interest to have deposited in order that the money may go back into trade; but as the government generally makes nothing out of the loan, except the benefit to the public just stated, and as the government would be greatly embarrassed by inability to secure its money when it needs it, and as the money is the money of all the people, the statutes require such security, and the advantage to the bank in getting the money and the prestige are such as to make it worth while for the bank to give security; but if a bank were required to give security for all its deposits, it would require the investment of all the capital in securities, and banking would cease to be attractive to any one."

"But the example of security for deposits does not justify the proposed system because the government gets its security from the bank that receives the deposit. It does not get its security from all the other banks in the community, and they are not required to furnish security for that which they do not control or have custody of, which is the system proposed by the Democratic platform."

Situation in Oklahoma.
Further on Mr. Taft said: "The case of Oklahoma has been cited as an instance to justify the Democratic platform. The system has been in operation only since March of this year. No panic or other financial disturbances has tested its efficiency. The statement is made that the public has so much confidence in the banks that the deposits in the unsecured banks are running down, and the deposits in the secured banks are running up. If my correspondents in Oklahoma can be credited, this increase of deposits was due to the fact that $2,000,000 of the State money received from the government for public school lands was moved from the national banks and put into the State banks operating under the guaranty, which would explain nearly all the increase in deposits."

Continue Roosevelt Policies.
"If I am elected, as I expect to be," said the speaker, "I shall have the greatest pleasure in playing in the presence of this grand audience all the energies and all the abilities of which I am capable to continue the Roosevelt policies, to make business honest and to keep every man within the law, be he humble or rich," was the climax of the speech he delivered to the audience which nearly filled the mammoth auditorium in St. Paul. The greeting he received at the twin cities was in keeping with the enthusiasm he has encountered throughout his invasion of the Northwest.

After being escorted to the auditorium by a lengthy torch-light parade in a rain-storm, Judge Taft was informed that in his large audience was a body of fully 800 laboring men, who devoted a large part of his time to the discussion of the labor problems.

TAFT ANSWERS FORAKER

Makes Plain Statement to Show He Is Not a Trust Man.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., September 26.—Judge Taft had something to say on the Foraker-Standard Oil episode for the first time to-day. He contends that Foraker's references to him in the statements made in the United States are not only untrue but also that he devoted a large part of his time to the discussion of the labor problems.

"First Senator Foraker says in his statement that I recommended Judge Doyle for United States judgeship in Northern Ohio, and the President acquiesced in the recommendation, when we knew that he was attorney for the Standard Oil Company, and argues that is a justification for him, while a Senator of the United States in accepting professional employment from the Standard Oil Company and in making what was in effect a newspaper partnership with the Standard Oil Company to control an organ of public opinion."

"Judge Doyle held no public office, and numbered the Standard Oil Company as only one among a number of clients. I told the President that Judge Doyle was a man of high character and a lawyer of great ability and experience and would make a good judge, but explained what his corporate professional connection had been, and the President, as between Doyle and Taylor, also an able man, preferred Taylor, and appointed him, not, as I recollect it, for any reason discreditable to Doyle, but because Doyle's very many corporate, professional association would make him less acceptable to the public and interfere with his usefulness as a judge."

"Second, Senator Foraker refers to my alleged receipt of favors from Mr. C. T. Lewis, partner of Judge Doyle and Taylor, also an able man, preferred Taylor, and appointed him, not, as I recollect it, for any reason discreditable to Doyle, but because Doyle's very many corporate, professional association would make him less acceptable to the public and interfere with his usefulness as a judge."

"The facts were exactly as he gives them I would be content to submit the justice of the parallel to the American people without comment. But the facts are not as he states them. I visited Middle Bass as the guest of the Middle Bass Club, as President Harrison McKinley and Cleveland had done. General Keifer invited me as the spokesman of the club. Mr. Lewis was president, and carried out the will of the club in making the arrangements. I did not travel on Mr. Lewis's private car. He tendered it, but I declined it. I hired a special car from Hot Springs to Toledo for the Pullman Company for $50 a day, and paid therefor for eighteen fares to the Ohio River and twenty-two fares to Toledo, the regular tariff for a special car, together with fares for berth. Mr. Lewis joined us with his private car when we were halfway to Toledo, and I spoke from his platform at stations because his was the end car, but I had my own car and used it and paid for it.

"The Middle Bass Club advised me that it would see to my carriage from Toledo to Middle Bass and secure for the purpose a private boat of Mr. Richardson's, who was a member of the Middle Bass Club. I did not know Mr. Richardson or what his business was when I went aboard his boat. I did not know, and don't know, that there is a glass trust or Mr. Richardson's relations to it, if it exists. I accepted his courtesy, as tendered on behalf of the club whose guest I was. I am indebted to all the members of the Middle Bass Club, numbering over 100, for their hospitality, but the attempt to connect me with the Standard Oil Company and the glass trust, if there is any, through the Middle Bass Club is ridiculous, and shows the extremity in which the author of the statement finds himself."

SHERMAN GOES TO WEST

Will Make Swing Around the Circle With Nicholas Longworth.

UTICA, N. Y., September 26.—With a roll of drums and surrounded by a glare of red fire, James S. Sherman, the Republican vice-presidential nominee, started to-night for the West, where he is scheduled to make a swing around the circle in company with Congressman Nicholas Longworth.

The nominee will deliver his first speech Monday night before the Hamilton Club, in Chicago, and will spend all of next week in Illinois, except on Saturday, when he will enter Indiana. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of week after next will also be spent in Indiana. Thursday Mr. Sherman will go to Ohio and finish the week there with the exception of a day which he will probably spend in Kentucky, speaking at Louisville. The trip will occupy the next two weeks and the speaking will run all the way from five-minute talks from a car platform to a formal address of an hour's length.

Congressman Sherman was escorted from his residence to the Central Station to-night by the Conkling Unconditional and a crowd of enthusiastic supporters numbering a couple of thousand.

KEATIN IN DUPONT'S PLACE

Will Serve on Executive Committee, But No Regular Appointment.

NEW YORK, September 26.—Chairman Hitchcock said Charles H. Keatin, of Ohio, will act in the place of T. Coleman Dupont, who resigned yesterday from the executive committee of the National Republican Committee. No permanent successor to Mr. Dupont will be named before next week. The chairman has no name under consideration for the place as yet.

The denial of the authenticity of an article claimed to have been written by Grover Cleveland, and published in the New York Times, caused considerable discussion at Republican headquarters. T. V. Oulahan, in charge of the literature bureau of the Republican National Committee, made the following statement on the subject:

"The Republican National Committee had calls for the Cleveland letter, and we sent out a number of copies as a campaign document. Mr. Hastings, executor of the Cleveland estate, told me two days ago that he was convinced that the letter was genuine. This was after the authenticity of the letter had been questioned. Now he comes out to-day and says he believes it was not authentic. Consequently, so far as the Republican National Committee is concerned, no further attention will be given to the document."

BALKAN CRISIS OVER ONE DINNER

respect from the Eastern Railway. Much strong feeling has thus been engendered among the people, who will not again permit the return of the line to the company.

"Such being the situation, the Bulgarian government will scarcely be able to give back the line. It will be obliged to keep in our hands the working of the railway, but we will be careful not to damage the material interests of the company and those of others interested in it."

"The Turkish government has dispatched a note to the Bulgarian government demanding the immediate return of the line to the company. To this Bulgaria has replied this is a question which will be settled direct between the Bulgarian government and the company."

Not Agree to Demands.

SOFIA, September 26.—The situation is unchanged. The government threatens to resign rather than agree to some Turkish demands. The Premier declares that Bulgaria will retain her hold on the Oriental Railway, come what may. In the best informed circles hope is still expressed that there will be a peaceful settlement of the dispute, notwithstanding the public excitement and the bellicose attitude of the government.

TO BUY SULTAN'S DOMAIN

[Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch.] LONDON, September 26.—Zionism promises to benefit materially Turkey's political liberation. The Hebrews, who under the regime of the Ottoman Sultans have been forbidden to buy land in Palestine, are now buying openly, and it is stated that a Jewish syndicate is negotiating for a large part of the Sultan's private domain that is now in the market, comprising the whole length of the Jordan Valley, from Tiberias to the Dead Sea.

There is little doubt that the Jews will soon repossess the site of ancient Jericho, which was the first fruits of the Israelitish conquest of Canaan. The greater part of Jerusalem, outside the walls, already belonged to Jewish capitalists. The Zionist owners who bought at various times secretly, notwithstanding the Sultan's prohibition, are now taking advantage of the equality proclaimed for all Turkish subjects. The Jews are openly claiming full rights of citizenship. Many prominent Hebrews have joined the Young Turkey committee at Jaffa and Jerusalem, while a society of Hebrews has been founded in Jerusalem, the object of which is to safeguard the rights of Jews in the empire and the promotion of education among them.

ORTH'S CAREER.

From Big Al Orth's career the Lynchburg correspondent of Sporting Life draws a lesson which should be learned and lived by every young ballplayer. This article is a good one, and is well worth reprinting.

The letting out of Al Orth by the New York Americans to manage the Lynchburg, Va., team marks the passing from the limelight of the big leagues of a most striking example to young ball-players of what clean living and the right mean to a player. When he feels his time has come to make room for young blood. From the time Orth left Lynchburg, thirteen years ago, to join the Philadelphia Athletics, he has never let public applause turn his head, nor the bright lights of a big city lure him away from the habits he had formed as a lad in a small town. The "smiling one" has ever been the quintessence of modesty. The writer has come in contact with Orth almost daily during the off seasons, and never once has he heard him speak of his achievements on the ball field. On the contrary, when he was at his zenith, and some one would refer to his star performance on some particular occasion, the big fellow would invariably smile, and deftly turn the conversation to some other subject. He has never let the reasons why Orth has "worn well" in his home town, and why he is even more popular to-day than when he pitched the Lynchburg team to victory in 1925. Al is devoted to his wife and children, and those who are close to him know that the longing to be with his family has been strong within him for the past several seasons. He did not "lay down" to get away from the New York team, but it is questionable if over a player on leaving the big leagues had less to regret than he has. From the large salaries he has earned, he has saved enough to be independent for life, and from the town he left as an ambitious youth he comes back as part owner, and with absolute control of a club in one of the best minor leagues in the country. Orth is popular in his home town for his baseball achievements, but all Lynchburg honors him for his manliness and integrity.

In the yawl class the Mattheeset won; sloop class, Kestrel won.

Tigers Win.

The Tiger football team defeated the first Virginia Regiment team at Byrd Park field yesterday in the first game of the season by the score of 26 to 0. The game was with the Tigers from the kick off. With the ball on the Tigers' five-yard line, the Regiment team was unable to score. The line-up for the Tigers was as follows:
